Japanschek as "Queen Hizabeth." The great tragedienne who, during the week has gratified the theater-going public by performances seldom now-a days equaded, was greeted by another large house last night, the audience being conspicuous for the presence of many who attended on Monday, Tuesday and Weduesday nights. The play was the Earl of Essez, a translation or adaptation by Janauschek herself, and one that does her infinite credit. As the Providence Journal tells us, in a brief synopsis of the plot, it is "a play in five acts, freighted with the fortunes of 'Elizabeth' in the closing years of her reign-a story elegant in ction, and abounding in elements that afford free scope for the passionate sarnstness and power that belong so peculiarly to her impersonations. The play opens at a time when 'Elizabeth' had been the reigning sovereign for more than twenty years, and when the most unhappy events of her career were gathering rbout her. The 'Earl of Essex' had been sent to quell a revolt in Ireland, when he suddenly returns to Lon-don in violation of the 'orders of the queen.' In consequence of alleged acts n Ireland, he is charged with felony, which charge he meets with the most audacious bearing, and flies to insurrec-tion upon the failure of his cause at court. His capture, imprisonment and execution supply the remaining incidents of the play. His public fortunes are complicated by a secret marriage with 'Lady Rutland,' maid of honer to the queen. The queen is also in love with him, and comes to a knowledge of the marriage at the most untimely juncture of affairs." This play affords a remarkable opportunity for grand and impressive acting in two characters; the part of "Elizabeth" is hardly mere prominent than that of the "Earl of Essex," and the Memphis publie has rarely seen two parts so grandly sustained. It would be hard to say whether in the first act, where the Queen" defends the man she loves from he charges preferred by her ministers, or in the third act, when she denounces him as a rebel at the close of his cavatter defense of himself at the royal palace, or in a later scene where the scoret of his marriage is disclosed, and she signs the warrant for his execution, it would be hard to say where the fervid and impassioned acting of Janauschek rose to its greatest hight; it was a noble and impressive portrayal throughout, and one n which this great artiste can have but few rivals. She was never once at fault, and if the play at times assumes a still-ness it is only to allow the audience time to prepare for that which ensues. Perhaps the finest and most artistic scene is that where "Lord Essex" comes efore the queen upon his return from Ireland, and is beset by her ministers. The proud disdain of the victorious lord contrasting so well with the petty natred of the ministers, who as he takes ecasion to say, were reveling in banquets at London while he was quenchng his thirst in stagnant pools, seems all the more natural to the man before whom sits the queen of England, her face wearing the took of impiscable re-venge and injored dignity. Mr. G. D. Chaplin, as "Robert, Earl of Essex," sus-

if we may so soeak, which characterized "Elizabeth's" career, and displayed itself most dreadfully when she signed her lord's death warrant. The play abounds with intense interest and is replete with thrilling scenes from the time we first behold the dramatic personal until long after the wounded lord, when leaning on his companion's arm says to Elizabeth, "You owe me death, now pay the debt." Its development and conclusion disappoint no one, and if Janauschek had no fame as an actress her portrayal of "Elizabeth" would suffice to place her among the brightest and greatest artists of the stage. She will appear to-night in Adrian the ball room was deserted, and the visitors partook of a sumptuous supper. After that dancing was resumed, and con-tinued until a late hour. The costumes worn were too varied in character to admit of a description. Many were of the most beautiful kind, and not only beautiful but novel, humorous and comic; in fact there was just such an array of costumes as we might expect to see upon an occasion so pleasant as this. ball, we repeat, did credit to the Miennerchor, and afforded pleasure and joy to every visitor. The Italian Opera To-Night To-night the Phillips Italian opera troups appear at the Greenlaw Operahouse, the play being the Barber of Scville. As we have previously stated this is one of the most thorough and tal-ented opera troupe, that has ever visited our city, and will afford a rare and delightful entertainment, meriting the appreciation of our most cultivated and enlightened citizens. Every member of the troupe is an artist, and in the cities which this troupe has appeared large houses have been attracted nightly. We have no doubt but what the Greenlaw Operahouse to-night and to-morrow night will be filled with our amusementoving people, for all who attend will be delighted by the excellent operatic entertainment of the Phillips opera troupe. The appearance of the great tragic artist, Mr. Lawrence Barrett, at the Memphis Theater on Monday evening next, the eighth instant, will be halled with pleasure by all lovers of the legitimate drama. Mr. Barrett is one of the most popular artists who visits Memphis, and from all classes of critics he has won the most enthusiastic praises that have ever been bestowed upon a tragedian. Even actors, who are probably chary of their eu ogies on brethren of their craft, have vied with each other in extolling his remarkable gifts. His career since playing here last season has been a series of ovations, and all unite markable gifts of histrionic genius who

BOARD OF HEALTH REPORT.

The lengthy report of Dr. Avent, president of the board of health, prevents as giving a fall synoisis. The total number of cenths is reported to be life, the death ratio being twonty three per thousand of the population. This compares favorably with the healthlest localities in the county, one hundred and thirty-seven deaths were from consumution, this being 12 per cent, of the entire mortality. This is due to the humaignation in this direction of persons predispised to consumption, and the large negro population among whom the serofulous element is so prevalent, as it is known to all southern physicians that but few a grace die of any other form of chrome disease. Although the negroes compose but one-fourth of the population, yet of the 137 deaths from consumption, 20 are collided, and 8 are of all other nationalities. This does not materially differ from the records of other cities of our southern States. This cose not materially differ from the rear was $25,856.16, which includes the cost of the quarantine and Happy Hollow, smounting to $6,116.53; this leaves the expense of the department proper at $18,296.65. The board recomments into every child be vaccinated within six months after birth, and that vaccination be made a condition of entering the public schools. Two dredge boats are necessary, and will appear to-night in Adrian the Actress, for her benefit. There will be, of course, a crushing house.

of their Pesition. Chief Athy yesterday received the the board of health for the month of following letter respecting the killing of January, as furnished for publication Captain White:

Tuesday, February 2, 1875.

Tuesday, February 2, 1850.

Captain Athy, Memphis, Tennessee:

Dhan Sire—The pirty who were after Captain White overtook him this mio ning. He was well-armed with two pist is and a shot-gin. He would not surrender, and one of the men shot him. He lived eeveral hours, and acknowledged that he was the same Captain White who broke jail at Memphis, and further stated that he was sentenced to fifteen years in the pentioniary. I dispatched to you to send some one to identify him. I will go out to-morrow morning to where he was killed, and will have a coroner's jury summoned, and get at the facts that I can gather and semi to you when I return, if there is no one here to see for thems-lives from Memphis. We would much prefer some one to come from your place, as we did all without a warrant from the suthorities. We thought it best to let no officer Issue a warrant against him, as this would give publicity. I do not think the law will punch anyone for what has been done, altrough it was done without a legal warrant. He had left the neighborhood several days since, and only returned yesterday. This will account for the tardiners in having him arrested. I refer you to Mr. Sinnot, of Edmunds, Pettigrew & Co.; D. B. M Callum, of Friedman Bros.; Or. B. F. Dickinson, of Dickinson, Williams & Co. to learn who and what kind of a man t am. There is so much confidence being practiced upon unsuspecting parties that I think this is due you. As a matter dence being practiced upon unsuspecting par-ties that I think this is due you. As a matter of course, the party who did not arrest, but tried and failed, because it could not be done, will expect the reward of one hundred dollars when it is proven that this was the Captain white. Write upon receipt of this, Yours JOHN BARHAM. Sheriff Anderson and Jailer Jackson are expected from Henderson to-day, where they went to identify the body. It seems that the question of the reward is greatly exordising some one, but it is not likely the round sum will be paid
